ABOUT PRODUCTION

One-Shot method

Each of our gins is produced using the "one-shot" method. This traditional method of gin production, originating from Great Britain, guarantees a natural depth of flavor and helps preserve the fresh aroma of each of the ingredients. "One-shot" requires putting the entire gin along with all the botanical ingredients into one vessel and one-time distillation of the product.

Copper Alembic

To distill our gins and vodkas, we use a copper still, a tool that has been used to produce the highest quality spirits for over 200 years. Copper catalyzes the breakdown of volatile substances that are formed during fermentation in batches and mashes.

Ingredients

The "one-shot" method requires us to carefully select ingredients and carefully analyze their taste, smell and quality. We import juniper from the sunny south of Europe, oranges from Ghana, aframonium paradise from Madagascar, and cinnamon straight from the Amazon.
